Summary	Malaria is a life-threatening disease caused by plasmodium parasites transmitted to humans through the bites of infected female Anopheles genus mosquitoes. Intracellular parasites utilize various mechanisms for intracellular invasion and blocking cellular immune response, including plasmodium OTU proteins, which demonstrate deubiquitinating activity.
Research areas	R&D only. Biochemicals, Pharmacology, Drug discovery and development

Product images	Coomassie blue staining of purified Plasmodium falciparum OTU protein (Cat# PY-OTU-50µg). The protein was produced from E. Coli cells transfected with CCHFV OTU vector (Cat#PY-OTU-50µg) and protein expression was induced with IPTG.
